

Fitchburg Art Museum hosts landscape painting show

Land Ho! is a group exhibition that Fitchburg Art Museum says “celebrates the timeless lure of the landscape in art. ... Land Ho! is not your typical landscape painting show, but rather an exhibition designed to reboot and refresh more traditional preconceptions of the genre.”

Organized by Fitchburg Arts Museum curator Mary Tinti and Koch curatorial fellow Emily Mazzola, the exhibition showcases eight New England contemporary artists whose works appear alongside 30 landscape paintings from the museum’s permanent collection.

Fitchburg State University professor Jeffrey Warmouth and his two children, Alex, 8, and Ben, 4, check out art by Sally Curcio during the “Land Ho!” exhibit’s opening on Sunday afternoon. See slideshow and video at www.sentinelandenterprise.com.

Curator Mary Tinti and Koch curatorial fellow Emily Mazzola opened the new exhibit.

Photos by Ashley Green

Visitors congregate at the Fitchburg Art Museum during the museum’s opening reception for the new exhibit “Land Ho!” on Sunday afternoon.

Artist Sue McNally, center, discusses her work with guests during the reception.